IF Arkansas must vote a general sales tax to make good the American guarantee of a free education for every child, then there is this to be said about a sales tax: It should be "straight across the board" with positively no exemptions.

ABANDONS MANILA

Quits Trying for Philippines, Seeks Safe Landing at Honolulu

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(P)—The Ulm plane, bound for Hawaii, is lost and running short of gasoline, said advices received by the Globe wireless station at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning (8 a. m. Hope).

In messages picked up at Honolulu, Ulm, pilot of the plane, requested that a radio beam be sent out so he might be guided to Honolulu.

The messages advised that the pilot had lost his bearings, and that the weather was bad.

Hops From California

OAKLAND, Calif.—(P)—Flight Lieut. Charles T. P. Ulm and two flying companions took off at 3:41 p. m. Monday on their trans-Pacific flight to Honolulu and Australia. Ulm expects to arrive in Honolulu Tuesday.

The Matson liner Lurline, 500 miles west of here, reported that Ulm's plane passed over the ship at 8 p. m. Monday.

Ulm and his crew, Co-Pilot George Littlejohn and Navigator J. L. Skilling, are charting the course of a new commercial air venture in which Ulm expects to inaugurate regular operations from Australia to Hawaii in two years. One of the longest all-water routes in the world lay ahead of Ulm.

Once their monoplane left the Farallone islands, guardians of the Golden Gate, behind, not a speck of land will they see until Koko Head juts up on the horizon, 2,468 miles distant.

Mysterious Woman Seizes Strangers, Hugs 'Em, Then Disappears

BOSTON, Mass.—(P)—Roxbury, the section of Boston that was the home of John L. Sullivan, once world heavyweight champion, and the birthplace of Revolutionary heroes, was awed Monday over the reports of a "woman hugger" roaming the streets and seizing members of the "stronger sex," kissing them and then disappearing.

A complaint, made by William Finn 39, recorded in Boston police annals the only complaint ever made against a woman hugger. Finn said he was hugged late Sunday night in Roxbury by a woman who pinned his arms behind his back, kissed him "a dozen times" and then disappeared.

Sales Tax for Schools is Proposed

O. E. Gates to Ask Liquor and Racing Tax for Textbooks

State Board to Draft General Sales Tax Bill for Legislature

RATE IS UNCERTAIN

Meanwhile, Representative Gates Pleads Case for Free Textbooks

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The State Education Board Tuesday authorized the drafting of measures to be presented to the legislature in January, carrying out the recommendation of the School Commission for a sales tax, new school bond refunding legislation, and the revamping of school supervision laws.

The board adjourned to December 17, at which time the draft of the proposed measures will be submitted. State Education Commissioner Phipps said the board did not decide what rate would be incorporated in the proposed sales tax measure, nor did he give out any information as to what had been decided on in the way of refunding proposals, except that two measures, one for the state legislature and the other to be presented to congress, would be drafted.

Liquor and Racing

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Representative O. E. Gates of Cleveland county, announced Tuesday he would again sponsor a bill to provide free textbooks for school pupils of the state, and that he proposed to raise the required revenue by the legalization of liquor and pari-mutuel betting on horse races.

Gates, whose votes during past sessions on the wet-dry question leaned heavily to the arid side, said he would put liquor and horse racing to a good purpose by taxing them to provide free text books.

A similar measure in the last regular session failed, but he said he believed it would be successful in the coming session.

For Sales Tax

LITTLE ROCK.—Legislative committees of the state Board of Education, the Arkansas Education association, the Arkansas Congress of Parents and Teachers, the County Examiners association and the state Federation of Teachers Monday adopted a resolution directing the state board to draft bills to be submitted to the 1935 legislature for the support and relief of Arkansas schools.

One of these bills will provide for a sales tax, but the committees decided to let the Board of Education determine whether the proposed tax would be a permanent or an emergency measure, and to determine the rates.

To Begin Work at Once

The board will begin work on the bills at once, and one representative of each of the organizations represented will work with the board. The bills will be submitted at another joint meeting of the legislative committees before the legislature convenes.

Representatives who will work with the board of education are: Mrs. Scott D. Wood of Hot Springs, representing the Arkansas Congress of Parents and Teachers; Harvey H. Haley of Hot Springs, president of the Education Association; D. N. Misenheimer of DeWalls Bluff, representing the county examiners; D. T. Henderson of Little Rock, representing the Teachers Federation; and Dr. C. O. Brannen, acting dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Arkansas.

Long debates Monday preceded the adoption of motions and resolutions endorsing recommendations made by Commissioner of Education W. E. Phipps in a report prepared for the committee last week.

Program Summarized

The following motions and resolutions were adopted, each endorsing one of the suggestions made by Mr. Phipps, and each including an instruction to the Board of Education to include it in the legislative program.

That a sales tax be adopted; that severance tax laws be revised; that income tax laws be revised; that tax assessment methods be changed.

That the state assume a greater proportion of aid to local districts, providing a minimum apportionment of $400 per teaching unit, in districts which vote an 18-mill tax.

That the new educational program provide aid for both elementary and high schools.

That the state board be empowered to work out a refunding program.

That the legislature be requested to consider early in January measures necessary to obtain emergency federal MARIANNA, Ark.—(P)—Sheriff W. F. Chambliss said Tuesday that a man answering the description of Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., charged with kidnapping Mrs. Alice Stoll, wealthy Louisville (Ky.) woman, is being held here until his fingerprints are checked with Kentucky authorities.

TULSA, Okla.—(P)—Phil Ken-

namer, 19-year-old son of a federal judge, was quoted Tuesday by Robert Thomas, 19, a companion, as saying he killed John F. Gorrell, Jr., because of an extortion note Kenner said Gorrell wrote. In a signed statement Thomas said Kenner confessed to him that he shot and killed Gorrell because of a note demanding $20,000 from Homer F. Wilcox, Sr., Tulsa oil man, under threat of kidnapping his daughter, Virginia Wilcox.

U. S. Policy Flayed by Utility Baron

Meanwhile, Manufacturers Suggest General Recovery Policy

NEW YORK.—(P)—The National Industrial Council, meeting to chart a fair weather course for American business, heard Tuesday a severe arraignment of the government's entrance into the electric power business.

Paul Clapp, vice-president of the Columbia Gas & Electric Co., asserted to the council that "the very opposite of the NRA objectives is being followed by the federal government in its present policy affecting electric power."

Program Outlined

NEW YORK.—(P)—Calling for cooperation "founded on the realities of experience, understanding and good will," the National Association of Manufacturers Monday submitted to the country's industrialists a platform for economic recovery.

Highlights of the platform follow: "Government should be the servant of its free citizens, not their master."

"Avoid policies which tend to centralize power over industry, labor and agriculture and the regiment American."

"Avoid any threat of bureaucratic tyranny."

"Balance the federal budget by adoption of policies which will stimulate business, restore employment, increase national income and permit cutting public expenses to fit reasonable taxes."

"Withdraw all federal aid from every state which does not reduce expenditures (excluding relief and bond obligations) to at least the 1926 level."

"Make progress toward the prompt balancing of the budget by rejecting payment of the soldiers' bonus until due."

"Substitute for existing state sales taxes and present selective federal sales and 'nuisance' taxes an equitable non-cumulative manufacturers' sales tax levied at only one point of manufacture, collected by the federal government and equitably shared with the states."

"The government should return as soon as practicable to a genuine and unrestricted gold standard with a definite content of the standard gold dollar."

"The Frazier-Lemke act frightens lenders from agricultural loans and should be repealed."

"Government should withdraw from all activities competing with those of its citizens. Stop government competition which converts the taxpayers' money into an instrument for his destruction."

Cobb's Famous Definition of Whisky Adopted by the U. S.

What It Does to the Men-Folks of Old Kentucky Is Recited in Prose and Rhyme

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Irvin S. Cobb of Kentucky may have answered the efforts of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration to obtain a definition of "corn whisky."

The administration said Monday that some authorities and distillers had been asked to submit evidence to be offered at a hearing called Wednesday to determine just what words best describe what Southerners call "corn."

"The Distillers Code Authority," the Control Administration said Monday, "has submitted the following rather outstanding authority, Mr. Irvin S. Cobb. Mr. Cobb is quoted as follows:

"This here fiery stuff called corn whisky, whether white or red, is an

Straw Ballot on Bankhead Law Is Published by Star

First Returns to Be Printed This Week—Ahead of Dec. 14th Voting

TWO PROPOSITIONS

Balloting on General Control Program, and Then the Bankhead Law

The Star today is publishing a straw ballot on the Bankhead Law, on which cotton farmers will legally vote Friday, December 14.

Results of the straw vote will be published by The Star from day to day, beginning the latter part of this week—giving advance notice of how local farmers will probably vote in the regular election a week from Friday.

Only actual farmers may vote. Ballots must be signed, and address given, but signatures will be kept confidential by The Star.

Mail or bring your ballot to The Star office, 212-14 South Walnut street.

The ballot provides for a vote on two propositions:

1. For or against compulsory crop control in any form.

2. For or against the Bankhead Law in 1935.

In a straw vote conducted last week by the Memphis Commercial Appeal there were the following results:

1. For a compulsory crop control 5,814; against 1,390.

2. For the Bankhead Law 3,195; against 4,048.

There is much speculation as to whether cotton producers far out in the territory will vote just as they did in the Memphis area, which is a key shipping center.

Opposition to the Bankhead Law is known to be strong in Houston, Galveston, Memphis and other shipping and exporting points—but the votes of the actual cotton producers will decide the issue.

FERA Workers to Get Local Scale

Government Attempts to Maintain Blanket Wage Scale

LITTLE ROCK.—General revision of wages paid both skilled and unskilled workers on FERA projects in Arkansas to make them conform to scales effective in communities where the work is being done, will be effected as soon as is possible, Floyd Sharp, state executive secretary of the FERA, said Monday following a meeting of the state Wage Scale Board.

Since the CWA program was abandoned March 31, skilled workers have been paid from 50 cents to $1 an hour according to zones, and unskilled workers, a minimum of 30 cents per hour.

Mr. Sharp said that committees would be set up in each county to determine the wage scale for that locality. The committees will be composed of the FERA county administrator, a representative of business and a representative of labor. Their recommendations will be subject to approval by the state board.

In determining the scale, Mr. Sharp said, prevailing wages of NRA codes will be taken into consideration.

(Mark an X in the square opposite the proposition you wish to vote for.)

Only persons now actively engaged in cotton farming are eligible to vote.

Ballot must be signed, but signature will be kept in confidence by The Star's editor and his poll assistants.

Richest Gold and Silver Strike Is Found at Mojave

Greatest Strike Since Gold Field and Tonopah, Nevada, in 1900

FOUND BY STUDENT

British Option Reported Taken on Part of Original Claim

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(P)—The Times says Tuesday that one of the richest gold and silver strikes since Gold Field and Tonopah, Nevada, in the early 1900's, has been discovered in the vicinity of Mojave, Calif.

The original strike, the Times says, was made by George Holmes, former University of Southern California student.

South African interests are reported to have taken an option on a portion of the Holmes claim.

State Senate to Cut Clerks to 38

Preliminary Caucus Votes to Continue Economy Program

LITTLE ROCK.—Members of the Arkansas Senate voted to limit the number of state employees for the coming General Assembly, to 38 at a luncheon given for the senators at Hotel Marion by Lieut. Gov. Lee C. Cazor Sunday.

The meeting was similar to one held two years ago when the senators agreed to limit the number of employees to 38 instead of the 75 or more persons previously employed.

An efficiency committee, composed of Senator Edward B. Dillon, Little Rock, chairman; Senator Charles I. Evans, Booneville, and Senator R. R. Thompson, Eureka Springs, was appointed to select senate employees on recommendation of the senators.

The list of employees will be completed before the senate convenes January 14, Mr. Cazor announced.

The senators went on record as advocating continued economical operation of the senate. It was recalled that the last session expenses were 75 per cent less than in 1931.

Senator W. F. Norrell of Monticello president pro tem of the last senate, said that the reduction in expenses in 1932 was largely the result of the preliminary meeting held before the General Assembly. The 24 senators in attendance Sunday were unanimously in favor of continuing the economies effected previously.

The senators adopted a resolution of appreciation to Lieutenant Governor Cazor, who was host at the luncheon. Senator Sam Levin of Pine Bluff, who was out of the state, was the only senator not present.

The session was attended by State Senator John L. Wilson of Hope.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Activities of Thyroid Depend on Iodine

The minerals you need most for your health are calcium, phosphorus and iron.

However, there are many others of considerable importance, including particularly iodine, potassium, sodium, magnesium, sulphur and chlorine, and, also, in very small amounts, copper, zinc, fluorine, aluminum, manganese and silicon.

The exact manner in which all these function in the human body has not been completely determined, but it is known that they are present and some of their purposes are understood.

Iodine has been studied particularly because of its relationship to the thyroid gland. It has been known since 1885 that iodine is a rather large constituent of this gland; but it is only within recent years that its relationship to the gland has been definitely determined.

Actually the human body contains 25,000,000ths of a gram of iodine, which represents 4/100,000th of the total weight of the body. Of the total iodine in the body, two-fifths is found in the thyroid gland. The activities of this gland depend largely on the iodine that it contains.

The natural supply of iodine coming into the body depends on the part of the country in which we live. The drinking water of various sections of the country varies in iodine content.

For example, the drinking water of Stanford, Calif., contains 105 times as much iodine as that of New York; and the New York drinking water contains 100 times as much iodine as that of Duluth and 50 times as much as that of Indianapolis.

The food available in various parts of the country also differs in the amount of iodine it contains. In fact, foods differ in their iodine content.

Iodine is invariably present in milk, but varies from a trace in the sections of the country where the supply of water is low to a great deal in those sections of the country where it is high.

Lobsters, clams and oysters contain more iodine than salmon, but salmon contains more than a good many vegetables.

Fresh water fish contain much less iodine than do salt water fish. Sea-weed contains a good deal of iodine, but is not much used as a food in the United States.

In Japan it is used a great deal and the Japanese suffer very little from goiter.

Among foods which contain relatively little iodine are white bread and oranges. Among those which contain considerable amounts of iodine are oysters, sardines, eggs and spinach.

The exact amounts of iodine necessary for life and health are not definitely determined, but it has been shown that children, and women who expect to give birth to children, should have at least 10/100,000ths of a gram of iodine each week.

Once upon a time the salt that we ate contained iodine, but modern refined salt in many instances has had the iodine removed. For this reason salt with iodine added is furnished to those who desire it.

Because the necessary iodine is easily available, it has not been suggested that foods in general be enriched in the content of iodine, as has been done by the addition of vitamin D to food products.

tribesmen. Materially, he wants for nothing. Spiritually, he is doomed to lifelong starvation.

His Indian heritage is too strong to be shaken off. That sense of intimate communion with earth and sky, that intangible personal dignity—these are a part of him, forever.

Yet he wants to be a white man. He accepts the white man's values and tries to forget the old Indian culture.

The only white culture which is offered him is shoddy and second-rate, and he dimly realizes it, but it makes no difference; he must have it.

The result is inevitably tragic. He goes to the white man's college, plays football, becomes an aviator in the World War—but, in the end, there is no place for him.

He is neither Indian nor white. He wastes his energies and talents because there is nothing else for him to do with them.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Germ of an Idea Is Almost Only One to Which Exposure Is Safe

There's this "out" "catching" thing. You still can "catch" a disease in spite of exploded theories.

I think the public is letting down its guard too much about germs. We always "shoot the whole works" when we get an idea. Some scientists have proved that the germs of thus-and-such a disease die when they reach the air. All the magazines print it. And then suddenly the good readers shout, "By Jove, I always thought this business of keeping folks out and disinfecting and boiling was nonsense. If it is true of such a dreadful disease as epizootic, it must be true of all of them. Hey, Molly, let the kids go in and play with Charlie. He's only got grippe, anyway."

Having just recovered, not quite from grippe that I inhaled from another member of the family, I think, Molly, that you'd better not.

Who am I to say how far germs get a free ride on a sneeze or how many can crowd on a towel? I don't know a thing about germs except when they begin to dig for quartz rock in my spine, and use my lungs for Big Bertha, and split my brain wide open with dull axes; but I can think aplenty.

Furthermore, I don't know just how international germs are, or whether Charlie's germs have passports to Jimmy or Sub or both.

All I know is that grippe is catching. And so are colds. And so is pneumonia and bronchitis and, of course, flu. It is only sense to keep others out of the suspect's path as much as possible.

Do we, at this stage of intelligence, need to be reminded that pillow slips and even beds of the "cold" patients (especially if we suspect a bit of temperature) should be one-man affairs? Or towels or handkerchiefs?

Not only should the afflicted be kept in bed, but the other children should be kept away. What may be only a day-or-two's upset for strong hearty Charles may mean a long and severe illness for Sue or the baby.

It isn't always easy to do. No one knows better than I how hard it really is. But if it is only a case of being soft-hearted, let dad and the youngsters be as funny as they like, and get out the coat of mail we need for our hearts sometimes. I'd just say NO—and save myself extra nursing.

Thanksgiving seemed to be enjoyed by everyone in this community, however a hard rain continued through the day and into the night.

Friends are sorry to hear of the illness of Von Arrington during the past week end. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Miss Jettie and Roxie Watkins spent the week end with their parents Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Watkins.

Aubrey Cox was a business visitor in Hope Saturday.

Tullie Hair of near Hope spent the week end visiting relatives in this community.

Victor Alexander of Dolph was hunting in this community Thursday. Sunday is our regular preaching day. There will also be preaching Saturday night, every body is urged to attend.

Lovable

By MARY RAYMOND

6284 N.E. 3RD AVE., HOPE, ARK.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, finds work in a library. She fails to leave with TONY MICHAEL, commercial artist, although warned against him by SARAH KENDALL, her roommate.

Enter the mopey PETER KENDALL, wealthy and prominent, who is engaged to VALERIA HENNING, society girl. Valeria spends much of her time with a gay crowd without Peter knowing about it.

Valeria asks Ann to marry him and she agrees. Although Tony has become engaged to JOE MACDONALD and displays an engagement ring, Tony promises Ann a ring for a Christmas gift but on Christmas Eve when Ann and Sarah prepare a festive dinner Tony fails to appear.

Valeria Henning attends a party at which a man is shot and injured. Peter reads the report in a newspaper and goes to see Valeria.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI
VALERIA'S eyes were wide and filled with tears. Her soft, red lips dropped disconsolately. She sat on a small stool near Peter, gazing pleadingly up into his face.

Peter thought he had never seen her look more childlike and lovely, but he was not moved by the thought.

"A bunch came by after you left," Valeria began.

Peter said stonily, "You were going to wrap packages. You had a frightful headache."

"It's terribly hard to refuse, sometimes. I didn't want to go."

"And perhaps you can explain the other times you've been at Dirk's place."

There was a look in Peter's eyes that was new. Valeria thought of the alibi she had prepared, but none of them seemed satisfactory.

"You're being cruel and unfair," she sobbed. "If you could only see how it happened! I wasn't to blame, and I could explain if you would only try to understand, Peter."

He stood up, looking down at her. He said tensely, "You can't explain anything. We're through."

Valeria slipped the ring that looked like a drop of white fire from her finger. As Peter made no move to take it, she laid it on the table. She was trembling. "You're breaking with me—"

"I'd have to be able to trust my wife."

Valeria's voice rose shilly. "What you want is an angel for a wife. All right, go out and see if you can find her!"

Her bitter taunt rang in his ears as he left the house. He was glad to get away, to feel the cold, clean air whip against him. Christmas! Merry Christmas to all! A merry, merry Christmas!

Tony and Ann had dined. They had gone to a musical comedy, but the feeling of depression had not lifted.

The big box with its gay wrappings was in Tony's car, still unopened. Tony had looked embarrassed when Sarah had walked out of the bedroom with it, saying, "Ann, for all your trouble you've forgotten to give Tony his Christmas present."

But Tony did not dive down into his pocket after Sarah had left, saying, "And here's your present, Ann."

Ann decided that he was waiting for the constraint between them to lift. But, try as she would, she could not be natural. Even the thought of the small, twinkling ring which was probably in his pocket meant now did not bring happiness.

It was while they were driving home, darkness gathering about them, that Tony said, "I've a little something for you at my place, Ann. I'll drop by and pick it up."

He parked the car in front and stepped out. Ann, in an impulse, "It's cold out here. Mind if I come in with you?"

Tony said slowly, "Why, of course not."

Ann had never been inside Tony's apartment, though she had waited outside for him many times while he went in for a quick change. He lived in a small apartment building, six out, and shared the services of a maid.

He opened the door and they stepped into the gloomy, box-like living room. Fumbling for the switch at the door, he said, "Not much to see. Just a lot of furniture thrown together."

The light flashed on, revealing a scene of wild disorder. Chairs in every position, cigar tray filled with ashes, cigarette stubs on the floor, a table covered with glasses. And bottles, bottles. Everywhere.

The light fell upon a couch in the alcove. Flung carelessly there, where Tony's nice new robe should have been, was a bright green negligee, dripping with lace.

There was no alibi away that night. And over in one chair, a very large and expensive box of candy, tied with a huge red ribbon—a box without seals or holiday wrappings.

Ann heard herself saying clearly, "Please don't say anything at all to me. I couldn't possibly hear it. And nothing you would say could make any difference."

Tony had stared at her, had seen something in Ann's eyes that had sobered him completely and thoroughly. He said harshly, "The trouble with you, Ann, is that you have a monogamist mind!"

The words did not register. Ann was walking out of Tony's place, closing the door. She was walking quickly, dazedly through the snow.

SHE passed several restaurants where people were coming and going. Before one of the smaller places she stopped.

Ann went inside and ordered a hot of coffee. Two cups of coffee would give her strength to go on, wherever she was going. She would find a movie where she could sit in the darkness. She would stay there until the telephone in Sarah's apartment had stopped ringing or Tony became tired of clanging on the doorstep.

She never wanted to see him again. Going out on Christmas Eve and getting drunk, forgetting that he had ever thought of an engagement ring.

The waiter set the pot of coffee before her and Ann poured out a cupful. She drank it slowly, poured out another cup with shaking fingers.

A man at a table across from her was staring at her out of somber eyes. Ann resented his stare until she saw it was Peter Kendall. Peter Kendall, looking haggard and sober. She smiled at him. It was a queer smile without mirth in it.

He did not smile, but he got up and came over to her. "Well, how's the game?" he asked. "Have you lost your job, Ann Hollister?"

"No, but I've lost something I prized more."

"Tough, isn't it?" He spoke as though he understood. Ann remembered then that Peter had lost something, too. Just what she had lost—faith and confidence in the one he loved.

That accounted for the hard, set look on his face and his bitter eyes.

"Maybe I shouldn't say this but I'm terribly sorry for you, Peter Kendall," Ann said impulsively. "And I'm sorry for you, Ann."

Her old humor broke through the dark wall of unhappiness. "That makes us even, in more ways than one."

"It's hard to believe someone could let you down." There was no gallantry in his tone. Just a simple statement of fact, as Peter said it.

"It was just that I expected too much of someone, I'm old-fashioned, I guess."

"Suppose," Peter suggested, "that I order something for both of us to eat. You look all in. Then I'll drive you home. You must eat something—like a good soldier."

FEELING his eyes on her, she forced herself to eat a little. Peter Kendall did not seem to be hungry either.

It was strange how parallel their troubles were. Stranger that both had come to this small restaurant in the heart of the city.

Peter said he was leaving next day.

"Going where?"

"Any place. Far away."

Ann thought Peter was lucky to be able to leave. She would have to stay here, to see Tony every day, to wait while her heart was aching for the slow processes of time to bring some healing of the wound.

Peter must have read some of these thoughts in her face. "Why don't you go away?" he asked. "Wouldn't it help?"

"I couldn't go far. And I couldn't afford to give up my job."

"No," Peter frowned, his eyes on her drawn face. "Things are not as simple as that."

"I wish they were," she said. "I'd like to go to the end of the world."

Peter paid the bill, took Ann by the arm and led her out to his big roadster.

"Let's drive around the park," he said, tucking a warm rug about her.

"The park? All right," Ann agreed without enthusiasm.

Peter laughed. He was thinking that last night Valeria had said, "Let's ride in the park tomorrow. It will be white and beautiful."

Another hour. Another girl to whom the park meant nothing. To whom places meant nothing because she was suffering just as he was suffering.

He wished Ann could go away. He would like to see the color come back to her cheeks and serenity to her stormy eyes. She was very different from the happy girl who had talked with him that day last summer.

They were driving through the park now. A beautiful, white park with small shrubs huddled under snowy cloaks and tall trees gleaming with myriads of icicles.

Suddenly Peter stopped the car, said something strange and fascinating. "Ann, marry me tonight and you can go with me."

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Makeup Christmas Presence Carefully.

The women who look smartest at holiday parties will be those who make-up to enhance their natural beauty. They'll apply cosmetics sparingly and with an eye to pointing up their most attractive features.

Remember that a good foundation lotion or cream is the basis of a perfect makeup. When it has been smoothed on face and neck, brush your forehead across a bit of cleansing cream, dip it in cream rouge and carefully blend the color on your cheeks. Don't drag the rouge too far downward. If you do, your face will have a rather old, drawn appearance.

Besides, the main purpose of artificial color on the cheeks is to form a flattering frame for the eyes.

Eyeshadow should be put on next. Select a shade that either matches or intensifies the color of your eyes. Use very little of it and don't extend it beyond the outer corners. When that's finished, pat on powder.

Use a large, clean piece of cotton each time you powder. You'll find that the powder will look much better and stay on infinitely longer if you press large quantities of it against the skin, leave it on while you finish dressing, then brush off the surplus.

Actresses, you know, always follow this method, whisking off the excess with a baby brush just before they go on stage.

Mascara and lipstick are the final touches. Put mascara only on the upper lashes and be sure that the little hairs don't stick together, thereby looking caked and messy.

Lipstick should follow the natural contour of your lips. Apply a lavish amount from corner to corner, leave it alone for three or four minutes and then with a piece of cleansing tissue, smooth down the rough edges, making the lips look absolutely natural and healthy.

The two friends were discussing motoring as they sat in the club. "I was once buying a second-hand car from a garage owner," said one. "Of course, he praised it up, as I was a novice. But I found a way of discovering absolutely all its faults."

"How?" asked the other.

"Why?" went on the first. "I had it on trial, and took it to another motor-dealer and asked him to buy it!"—Montreal Star.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CAYTON

We have had a good many books describing the injustices which have been done the American Indian. But John Joseph Mathews' novel, "Sundown," is pretty nearly the first one to show in detail how that injustice can still be active in modern times.

The hero of this book is a young descendant of the Osage Indians of Oklahoma—a mixed-blood, whose lot is actually made worse instead of better by the fact that he is part white.

He grows up on the reservation just in time to share in the riches which the oil boom gave the bewildered

Couzens Demands Borah 'Showdown'

Advises Idahoan to Put Up Alternative Program for the New Deal

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Borah, who demanded a reorganization of the Republican party, received a challenge Tuesday from Senator Couzens, Michigan Republican, to take the chairmanship and suggest a new platform. He said Borah, like Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, campaigned against certain aspects of the New Deal but "neither one was successful because they offered no substitutes for the programs they criticized."

The Michigan senator's entry into the party controversy came shortly after Henry P. Fletcher, Republican National Committee chairman, flatly declined to resign at Borah's request.

Looking Toward the Light

We asked the robin as he sprang from branch to branch and sweetly sang.

What made his breast so round and red.

'Twas looking toward the sun," he said.

We asked the violets sweet and blue, Sparkling with morning dew.

Whence came their color; then so shy, They answered, "Looking toward the sky."

We saw the roses pale by one, Unfold their petals to the sun.

We asked what made their tints so bright.

They answered, "Looking toward the light."

We asked the thrush whose silvery notes

Came like a song from Angel's throat,

What made him sing in the twilight din.

He answered, "Looking up to Him."

McMath, program chairman, Miss Mina Mae Milburn, music chairman, Mrs. Roy Stephenson; scrap book chairman, Mrs. Ernest Still; hospitality chairman, Miss Vera Van Sickle; hostess chairman, Miss Norma Turner; service chairman, Mrs. Jimmie Jones. The circle voted to have a rummage sale for the coming Saturday. At this time, the retiring Missionary Society President, present at Dr. and Mrs. Fred Harrison to the circle. During the social hour a delicious salad course was served with hot tea.

Circle No. 4 of the W. M. S. First Methodist church held their December meeting Monday at the home of Mrs. J. W. Patterson on South Hervey street, with Mesdames A. K. Holloway, M. M. Smyth, Ewing McKerson and Dan Green as associate hostesses. The meeting opened with the song "Silent Night." Mrs. Steve Carrigan Jr., chose for her devotionals, "The Psalm" and in an interesting manner presented illustrations of their inspiration and effect on the lives of men in the various periods of the world's history. Following prayer, the minutes read and approved. At this time, Mrs. O. A. Graves, the retiring Missionary Society president introduced the new pastor, Dr. Fred Harrison and Mrs. Harrison. A financial report was given by Mrs. John P. Cox, showing that the circle had met its budget and held a substantial surplus. The circle voted to send a financial report to Mrs. George Ware, who was circle chairman for the first three quarters and a note of appreciation for her services be written, a rising vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Stith Davenport who succeeded Mrs. Ware as chairman. The secretary was instructed to send a note of sympathy to Mrs. M. M. McCloughan who is ill in Texarkana. A "Harvest Time" play entitled "Gather Us In" was presented under the direction of Miss Dell McClanahan, assisting were Mrs. Dell McClanahan, Mrs. H. H. Stuart, Mrs. Chas. Harrell, Mrs. E. P. Young, Mrs. Dewey Hendrix, Mrs. E. P. Stewart, Mrs. Frank Stanley and Mrs. Edw. Ward. Followed by a social hour at which time a most tempting salad course was served to 22 members and one guest.

Circle No. 3 of the W. M. S. First Methodist church, met at the home of Mrs. R. M. Briant Monday afternoon at 2:30. The meeting was opened by singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts in Christian Love." Seventeen members responded to the roll call. Mrs. Briant read a few chosen verses from the fourth Psalm, after which Mrs. Foy Hammons led in prayer. A short business session was held in order to get ready for closing the year's work. A happy interruption occurred when Mrs. O. A. Graves arrived accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Fred Harrison and in a short earnest talk urged the circle members to give them the same splendid cooperation they had given her as president of the Missionary Society. In order to bring about a closer fellowship, Mrs. Graves asked the Circle leader, Mrs. R. M. Briant to introduce Rev. and Mrs. Harrison to each member. Rev. Harrison responded in a few helpful remarks telling the circle he was happy to be in Hope, and asked them to assist him in every way possible in the work he was called to do as pastor of the First Methodist church. The circle stood while Dr. Harrison prayed God's blessings upon the church and its members. An interesting and pathetic play, "Gather Us In" was presented by Mesdames J. A. Henry, Sam Womack, Earl and Ernest O'Neal, Gibb Lewis, Claude Nunn, Dan Smith, Fay Hammons and C. Cook. Their talent was proven in their portrait of the characters in this play. In a few closing remarks, Mrs. Briant expressed her deep appreciation of each member for their loyalty, cooperation and helpfulness, paying special tribute to Mrs. Don Smith who has been the inspirational, untiring worker in leading Circle No. 3 in 1934, also Mrs. Homer Jewell, who for three years has been the circle's most inspiring spiritual things, never hesitating to word that was spoken, but always sitting close by her side, lending all she had in moral, spiritual and financial support. Mrs. Jewell has the distinction of being one of the pioneer missionary women of Methodism. It was in her home where Bishop Wrightman was being entertained, that a group of earnest women came to hold a conference with the Bishop as to the advisability of organizing a Women's Missionary Society, and through her influence and work the millions of women who now compose this organization, owe much of their success. After 61 years in the work, she is still an active member. Mrs. Briant presented each one present with a copy of the Gospel of St. John which was written, "That Ye Might Believe That Jesus Is the Christ, the Son of God; and That Believing, Ye Might Have Life Through His Name."

Miss Olive Jackson has returned from Arkadelphia, where she was called to attend the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Josephine Shackelford, who passed on at her home in that city last week.

Mrs. A. C. Moreland has returned from a week's visit with relatives and friends in Louisiana points.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church opened their Week of Prayer services for world wide missions Monday afternoon at the church. Mrs. Hugh Smith, general program chairman, presided. Circle No. 1 with Mrs. A. M. Key leader presented the program, using as her inspiring subject, "Hearts Ready for Jesus." Mrs. Edwin Dosssett, gave a devotional in keeping with the program subject. Mrs. Smith in a short talk discussed the themes for the week's service. Splendid talks were made by Mrs. Fanny Garrett, Mrs. Ida Boyett, Mrs. A. M. Key, Mrs. W. B. Mason and Mrs. J. H. Walker followed by the Lottie Moon offering. On Wednesday evening at the regular prayer service, Mrs. Smith will present the W. A. and other young peoples organizations of the church in a Christmas pageant, entitled Christmas For Christ. The services will open at 7:45.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sandefur have as house guest, their nephew, George Brandon, of Marshall, Texas.

The Symptoms

"Warning—Illicit corn liquor may easily be identified by these: It smells like gangrene starting in a mildewed silo; it tastes like the wrath to come and when you absorb a deep swig of it you have all the sensations of having swallowed a lighted kerosene lamp.

"A sudden violent jolt of it has been known to stop the victim's watch, snap both his suspenders, and crack his glass eye right across—all in the same motion.

That a full investigation be made of the status of the permanent school fund, to bring about restoration of diverted money and increase the fund.

That Mr. Phillips' suggestion for improving school supervision be adopted.

$2,500,000 More Revenue Needed.

It was said that approximately $2,500,000 additional revenue will be necessary to provide the apportionment of $400 per teaching unit, and that districts not voting an 18-mill tax would receive a reduced apportionment.

There was much discussion of the proposed sales tax, and Dr. Brammen suggested that it be adopted for not more than two years for trial. However, the school leaders apparently believed the sales tax the only adequate new source of revenue.

"We have been challenged to draft a program," one of them said. "We are trying to do this the best way we can to save and maintain our schools. Then, if the legislators don't like our plans, they ought to find some other methods which would serve as well."

Navy to Ask for 6,500 More Men

Total of 88,000 Wanted to Bring Man-Power Up to 85% of Capacity

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The navy is preparing to press vigorously demands that congress make available around $6,500,000 to bring man-power of the nation's fighting vessels up past the danger line.

Secretary Swanson left no doubt in his annual report Sunday that he considers the personnel question one of the most important confronting his department. He said:

"At present the shortage of both officers and the men threatens the high state of efficiency which our fleet has attained."

Eighty-five per cent of full man-power for the large vessels of the fleet was described as "the minimum below which it is not safe to go." A still higher percentage is needed for such small ships as destroyers, submarines and auxiliaries.

For the present fiscal year, Swanson said, 86,645 enlisted men should have been in the service for the battleships and cruisers to maintain 85 per cent of complement. Funds were provided for an average of only 81,500.

For the next fiscal year, the secretary is asking an average of 88,000, or a 6,500 boost. It costs the navy around $1,000 a year for pay, subsistence and transportation for an enlisted man. Thus the increase would mean an outlay of around $6,500,000.

Navy officials said no legislation other than that providing the money would be necessary to increase the enlisted strength. This was given a top limit of 137,485 men back in 1918. Since then the actual strength has been set by the amount of money made available.

on this question.

If Arkansas decides to legalize whisky for taxation purposes, this much at least should be done:

1. Restrict the sale to state-operated dispensaries under a State Alcohol Authority, taking liquor out of private channels entirely.

2. Forbid any advertising of whisky whatsoever.

The Star accepts beer advertising, but it will not print whisky ads whatever the people of Arkansas decide to do about legalization.

We went on record that way a year ago last summer—a record followed in prohibition days 20 years ago by such papers as the Kansas City Star and the Chicago Tribune.

Advertising sells goods—sells lots of them.

It is one thing to know that people drink whisky.

But it is quite another thing, to be in the business of promoting them into drinking still more whisky.

Charges Against Wilson Dropped

Bailey Nolle Prosses L. R. Indictments—They Belong to Camden

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Indictments charging embezzlement against former Lieutenant Governor Lawrence E. Wilson, of Camden, and his secretary Mrs. Lois Crafton Jeffries, in connection with his services as liquidator of three closed south Arkansas banks in 1931, were nolle prossed in circuit court here Monday by Prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey.

Bailey said he doubted the court here had jurisdiction to try the charges which grew out of a special investigation conducted by State Comptroller Griffin Smith.

The indictments were returned June 27, 1933, and Wilson and Mrs. Jeffries, who resides here, made bond. Wilson was acquitted at Camden of embezzlement charges in connection with his services as liquidator of the closed Ouachita Valley Bank. He was liquidator also of the Bank of Stephens, at Stephens, and of the bank of Louann, at Louann.

The indictments nolle prossed here

Monday charged Wilson and Mrs. Jeffries jointly with embezzling $2300 from the Bank of Stephens, $2000 from the Ouachita Valley Bank, and $1000 from the Bank of Louann.

The indictments, Bailey said, were based on checks drawn by Wilson and made payable to Mrs. Jeffries, and he added that the Pulaski county grand jury took cognizance of the case because the checks had been sent here. Wilson said the checks scrutinized by the grand jury were for services by himself and Mrs. Jeffries as liquidating officials.

If the world's diamond output for 1933 were combined into one large diamond, it would make a 5 1/2 foot cube with a weight of 1 1/2 tons.

HOW FAMILY LAXATIVE

Suits Young and Old

Saliva and digestive juices prepare your food for your stomach, and because you have Fern-a-mint, the delicious chewing gum laxative, these same juices place the laxative in your system gradually. No mass of laxative hits your system suddenly to upset its delicate balance. This more natural, gentle, gradual action prevents strain, discomfort. It makes Fern-a-mint ideally gentle for children, yet thoroughly positive for any member of the family. Doctors prescribe the laxative in non-habit forming Fern-a-mint. It is for pleasant correction without upset to stomach or diet. Delay is dangerous. Today get back on schedule and stay there. Delicious Fern-a-mints at drugstores, 15c and 25c.
